After Lincoln was inaugurated Pres. ident he very soon had a Cabinet in trigue on his hands and there were ap parent evidences that the party was going to pieces. Lincoln passed away, and again early in the new administration the party was torn with dissension Andy John son fully expected to wreck it, but even a President with all the patronage in the government in his control, and the Democratic party as an ally, could not accomplish that end, and in 1868 Gen eral Grant was elected. His two terms were characterized by trouble within our ranks, in which Samner, Schurz and Declittle were leading inalcontents, and in 1876 the Democrats were confident shelr time had come But it had not General Haves was elected, and his administration, like his predecessors, had to withstead the brunt of an internal flict. WE believe that we risk nothing in saying that when President Garfield is invited to involve the administration in a struggle with the supporters of Mr. Conking in the New York legislature, he will tell his tempters to go to a place several degrees warmer even than Washington in midsummer, while Mr. Blaine has enough to do to look after the affairs of his own state-if he has any time to spare from the duties of the state department-without meddling with the offairs of another state. Mr R hartson having been strong enough to secure his confirmation in the face of Mr Conking s opposition ought to be strong enough to defeat his antagonist now in the state legislature, without dragging the administration into the fight—or if he should, go down in the attempt. And the anti Conkling men, in order to carry out their plan, oughtn't to resort to the dodge of stay ing out of caucus, either - Springfuld

In his domestic life the late Colonel Thomas A Scott was unusually fortu-nate and happy. His temperament was cheerful and buoyant, and he was able at times to relieve his mind of business, at times to reneve his mind of business, and to give himself up to the enjoy-ment of his home life. Whon quite a young man he married Miss Mulron, of Columbia, in Pennsylvania, who died leaving him a son and a daughter His second wife, who survives him, was Miss Annie Riddle, of Pitt-burg, a most accomplished lady and a daughter of Mr Robert M. Riddle, editor of the Pittsburg Commercial. By this union he leaves two sons—Thomas A. Jr., and Edgar Thomson Scott—and a little daughter. The fortune left by Colonel Scott is estimated by his friends at from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 Shiloh's Consumption Cure.
